Abigail is a human rights activist and community development worker focusing on gender justice, specifically addressing child marriages, female genital mutilation, and sexual abuse.

Banesa is an activist and facilitator who provides capacity-strengthening and empowerment for women, survivors of violence, and young people in Peru.

Faith is an activist and broadcaster who used community radio to support women to claim their communications rights and define their political priorities.

Jazz is an actress and activists who utilises theatre to create radical spaces within the performing arts in order to encourage feminist mobilizing and political advocacy.

Kinja is an activist focused on addressing the rights of indigenous peoples in the Philippines who often experience several human rights violations by leveraging indigenous knowledge.

Nana is an activist who advocates for the rights of rural trans women, trans youth sex workers, and other gender diverse youth in Western Uganda.

Perk is an environmental activist, graphic designer, and artist focusing on utilising non-violent direct action tactics and coalition-building to address climate change in the Ghanaian context.

Raed is a writer and community organizer who leverages storytelling to share the experiences of Palestinians living under occupation in Gaza.

Sabir is a human rights activist focused on mobilizing communities for the prevention of gender-based violence, women’s political participation, sexual reproductive and health rights, and youth engagement.

Seif is a queer-feminist activist focusing on leveraging innovative and creative forms of action within both feminist and queer struggles in Tunisia.